

when large companies
control the
airwaves, the
dangers of media
consolidation become
self evident, such
as Sinclair
Broadcasting's
attempt to pre-empt
their stations'
regular programming
in order to run an
anti-Kerry
documentary days
before the election.

Clearly, Sinclair
Broadcasting would
NOT be serving the
public interest (as mandated by FCC law)
with this one-sided
exercise in
propaganda, but
rather their own,
and i can't imagine
why they wouldn't be
in violation of
federal election law
as well.

Sadly, this is just one more reason why
the license renewal
process needs to involve more than a
returned postcard.
Thank you.
